

NATIONAL IMMIGRATION PROJECT

Lawyers for the Movement

Publication of the National Immigration Project 2025. This resource is released under a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License (CC BY 4.0). The resource is intended for authorized legal counsel and is not a substitute for independent legal advice provided by legal counsel familiar with a client's case. This resource was created by Arianna Osuna, UCLA, B.A. anticipated 2027 and reviewed by Victoria Neilson, National Immigration Project Supervising Attorney and are current as of November 13, 2025.

Ecuador DOS Human Rights Report Comparison

2023 Report	2024 Report	Notes
Executive Summary
There were no significant changes in the human rights situation in Ecuador during the year. Significant human rights issues included credible reports of: cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment by the government; harsh and life-threatening prison conditions; serious problems with the independence of the judiciary; serious restrictions on freedom of expression and media, including violence against journalists and the existence of criminal libel laws; serious government corruption; and extensive gender-based violence, including domestic or intimate partner violence, sexual violence, workplace violence, and femicide. The government took credible steps to identify and punish officials who may have committed human rights abuses. Violence, including killings, by criminal groups increased. Members of criminal gangs in prisons committed acts of torture and killed their rivals during prison disturbances. There were incidents of violence and threats of violence against politicians, journalists, prosecutors, and judges likely perpetrated by nongovernment actors. Members of society engaged in crimes involving violence or threats of violence targeting lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer, or intersex persons. The government investigated and prosecuted such actions.	On January 9, President Daniel Noboa decreed a state of emergency to stem escalating violence from local and transnational organized crime groups. The president directed police and military forces to conduct enhanced security operations against these groups to address security threats. Significant human rights issues included credible reports of: arbitrary or unlawful killings; torture or cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment; arbitrary arrest or detention; and serious restrictions on freedom of expression and media freedom. The government took credible steps to identify and punish officials who committed human rights abuses. Kidnappings and extortion by criminal groups increased. Imprisoned members of criminal gangs staged disturbances leading to prison breaks. The government investigated and prosecuted instances of violence and threats of violence likely perpetrated by nongovernment actors against journalists and public officials.	The 2024 report eliminated over half of the content from the 2023 report, including LGBTQ+ threats and violence, as well as harassment of domestic and international human rights organizations.
Section 1. Respect for the Integrity of the Person	Section 1. Life	2024 report has updated section headers.
a. Arbitrary Deprivation of Life and Other Unlawful or Politically Motivated Killings	a. Extraducial Killings	2024 report has updated section headers.
There were no reports that the government or its agents committed arbitrary or unlawful killings, including extrajudicial killings, during the year.	There were a few reports the government or its agents committed arbitrary or unlawful killings during the year. President Noboa's January 9 decree of a state of emergency characterized 22 transnational criminal groups as "terrorists" and authorized security operations targeting these groups, during which 15 individuals were killed.	The 2024 report changes the language from stating there were "no reports" of arbitrary or unlawful killings by government agents to acknowledging "a few reports" of such killings. The 2024 report also adds discussion of President Noboa's state of emergency decree and security operations targeting criminal groups that resulted in 15 deaths.

Regarding the deaths of protesters during the June 2022 demonstrations, a local human rights organization reported the attorney general's investigation had yielded few results and progressed slowly. Although the Attorney General's Office summoned more than 80 police officers to testify, fewer than 20 came forward. Civil society and social organizations claimed authorities failed to call individuals to testify who were with one of the persons killed, Byron Guatatuca Vargas, when he died.	President Noboa issued 11 executive decrees declaring and renewing states of exception throughout the year to curb rising crime and support the government's efforts to counter organized crime groups, as well as electric power outages caused by drought conditions. The decrees enabled armed forces support to police operations. The Constitutional Court declared unconstitutional two executive decrees and limited the scope of two others.	The 2023 report focused on unresolved investigations into deaths of protesters during the 2022 demonstrations and concerns regarding accountability and lack of cooperation from police officers. The 2024 report shifts focus toward President Noboa's repeated states of exception and expanded military involvement in security operations, while also noting Constitutional Court limits on some executive decrees.
As of October 31, police reported more than 6,550 homicides, an increase of almost 70 percent compared with 2022. Police attributed a large part of the country's rising homicide rate to increased drug trafficking and conflicts among gangs fighting over drug trafficking routes. On March 3, President Guillermo Lasso declared a state of emergency in the coastal province of Esmeraldas. Media reported a mass killing on April 11 at the fishing port in Esmeraldas, when 30 hooded men arrived aboard boats and began shooting at residents and fishermen, killing nine and wounding four. The minister of interior attributed the killings to a dispute between local drug gangs for control of the port.	No similar language in this report.	The 2023 report documents a increase in homicides linked to drug trafficking and gang violence, including mass killings and states of emergency in coastal provinces. The 2024 report does not mention these incidents or any related discussion of homicide statistics and gang-related violence in Esmeraldas.
Drug gang violence dramatically increased in the coastal provinces of Guayas, Santa Elena, and Los Rios. In March and April, authorities registered a surge in kidnappings, robberies, and killings, including a beheading. On April 1, President Lasso announced urgent security measures to confront crime, including declaring a state of emergency and curfew in the three provinces.	No similar language in this report.	The 2023 report highlights escalating drug gang violence in coastal provinces, including kidnappings, robberies, killings, and emergency security measures imposed by President Lasso. The 2024 report does not mention these incidents or related emergency actions in Guayas, Santa Elena, and Los Rios.
Media reported 14 attempts to kill candidates and elected officials, resulting in the deaths of four political candidates, five elected officials, and one political party leader as of October. On August 9, gunmen shot and killed presidential candidate Fernando Villavicencio at a Quito campaign event. The attack occurred 11 days before the first round of snap presidential and legislative elections. Police shot the suspected killer seconds after the event, and he died from his injuries shortly afterwards. Police arrested 13 additional suspects in the killing, and on August 10, a judge ordered pretrial detention for all 13 suspects. Six suspects were found killed in the Litoral prison in Guayaquil on October 6. Another suspect was found dead in the El Inca prison in Quito on October 7. A pretrial hearing date for the remaining six suspects was scheduled for December 19.	In February, gang members killed Diana Carnero, a councilwoman in Naranjal, Guayas Province. Media reported seven deaths among local officials in at least 10 incidents involving the killing or attempted killing of political leaders and elected officials.	The 2023 report documents widespread political violence, including multiple assassination attempts and the killing of presidential candidate Fernando Villavicencio during the election period. The 2024 report references continued violence against political leaders and elected officials but on a smaller scale, highlighting the killing of councilwoman Diana Carnero and several attacks against local officials.
On February 26, the Confederation of Indigenous Nationalities of Ecuador reported two unidentified gunmen killed the confederation's director for international relations and environmental activist, Eduardo Mendua, outside his home in the Amazonian province of Sucumbios. Mendua's death occurred amid confrontations between Indigenous communities and the state-owned oil company Petro Ecuador. According to the Attorney General's Office, three suspects were in custody.	No similar language in this report.	The 2023 report documents the killing of Indigenous leader and environmental activist Eduardo Mendua amid tensions between Indigenous communities and the state-owned oil company Petro Ecuador. The 2024 report does not mention Mendua's killing or any related discussion of violence against Indigenous activists.
In December 2022, the Guayas Provincial Court sentenced a member of Los Águilas gang to 30 months in prison for his involvement in the August 2022 attack in the Cristo del Consuelo neighborhood in Guayaquil that killed five persons, injured 17 others, and destroyed seven houses.	No similar language in this report.	The 2023 report references the prosecution and sentencing of a Los Águilas gang member connected to a deadly 2022 attack in Guayaquil that resulted in multiple deaths and injuries. The 2024 report does not mention this case or related discussion of accountability for prior gang violence incidents.
b. Disappearance	c. Disappearance and Abduction	2024 report has updated section headers.
There were no reports of disappearances by or on behalf of government authorities.	The government disputed an NGO's reporting of an alleged enforced disappearance in the Cotopaxi prison and vouched that the individual was in custody and "in good health." The government did not comment on two other alleged enforced disappearances by the same NGO.	The 2023 report states there were no reports of disappearances by or on behalf of government authorities. The 2024 report adds allegations of enforced disappearances reported by an NGO, including a case in Cotopaxi prison, while noting the government disputed the claims and provided limited public response regarding other allegations.
c. Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman, or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, and Other Related Abuses	a. Torture and Cruel, Inhuman, or Degrading Treatment or Punishment	2024 report has updated section headers.

While the law prohibited torture and similar forms of intimidation and punishment, there were credible reports police officers and prison guards abused suspects and prisoners.	The law prohibited torture and similar forms of intimidation and punishment.	The 2024 report removes specific language stating there were credible reports of police officers and prison guards abusing suspects and prisoners, while retaining language that the law prohibits torture and similar forms of intimidation and punishment.
On August 1, the Attorney General's Office initiated criminal proceedings against five active-duty police officers for the alleged rape of a citizen detained in a Community Watch Unit in Guayaquil on July 30. According to the complaint, two of the accused officers allegedly raped the individual with an object, while the others allegedly sprayed him with pepper spray and hit him in his back and face.	A released prisoner detained during the state of emergency said that, on one occasion, military officers put prisoners face down and stepped on their toes, backs, heads, and necks with their boots and then randomly selected prisoners to submerge the detainees' heads into a water tank while applying electric shocks to demand information regarding weapons or drugs deposits.	The 2023 and 2024 reports both document allegations of abuse by security forces, but provide different examples. The 2023 report focuses on alleged sexual assault and physical abuse by police officers in detention, while the 2024 report documents allegations of torture and mistreatment by military officers during the state of emergency.
Authorities also were investigating two alleged cases of rape by four active-duty military officers in Cuenca. The sexual assaults allegedly occurred on different dates and against two different women: a second lieutenant and an enlisted soldier. According to the allegations, the first case allegedly occurred in December 2022 inside a military compound, while the second case allegedly occurred in March in a hostel.	No similar language in this report.	The 2023 report documents investigations into alleged sexual assaults committed by active-duty military officers against two women in Cuenca. The 2024 report does not mention these cases or related allegations of sexual abuse by military personnel.
Prison and Detention Center Conditions	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Prison and Detention Center Conditions.
Prison conditions were harsh and life threatening due to gross overcrowding, food shortages, inadequate sanitary conditions, lack of medical care, and gang violence.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Prison and Detention Center Conditions.
Abusive Physical Conditions: Prisons continued to be overcrowded. According to the government's National Service of Comprehensive Attention to Adults Deprived of Liberty and Adolescent Offenders, the overcrowding rate was 13 percent above designed capacity as of July 21, compared with 8 percent in 2022. The overcrowding rate varied by prison, with some prisons such as the Guayaquil Regional Prison (and the Litoral prison in particular) significantly overcrowded and others such as the Riobamba Prison operating under capacity.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Prison and Detention Center Conditions.
Access to and quality of food, potable and hot water, heating, sanitation, and medical care were inadequate.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Prison and Detention Center Conditions.
Multiple institutions, government officials, and nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) reported criminal gangs controlled most prisons. An NGO reported health workers were reluctant to enter the prisons because they feared being attacked. The NGO said gangs monopolized the food supply and distributed meals at their discretion.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Prison and Detention Center Conditions.
Prison officials and human rights organizations agreed most violent deaths in prisons were the result of rivalries among criminal gangs with links to drug cartels. Fighting between drug trafficking gangs in prisons led to 54 violent deaths through August 21. On July 22, a three-day clash between gangs in a Guayas prison left 31 dead, according to the Attorney General's Office.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Prison and Detention Center Conditions.
On September 6, several human rights organizations reported that male inmates entered the women's pavilion in a prison in Quevedo to rape, attack, and torture female inmates in complicity with the prison's authorities. Authorities' responses were pending as of the end of November.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Prison and Detention Center Conditions.
Administration: Authorities sometimes conducted investigations of credible allegations of mistreatment in prisons.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Prison and Detention Center Conditions.
Independent Monitoring: Civil society representatives continued to report restrictions to monitoring by independent NGO observers.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Prison and Detention Center Conditions.
d. Arbitrary Arrest or Detention	Prolonged Detention without Charges	2024 report has updated section headers.

The law prohibited arbitrary arrest and detention and provided for the right of any person to challenge the lawfulness of their arrest or detention in court, but there were reports provincial and local authorities did not always observe these provisions. According to NGOs, illegal detentions continued to occur.	Several NGOs reported the existence of arbitrary arrests by the police and military during the government's declarations of a state of emergency. In a report covering the period from January 8 to April 8, the Regional Human Rights Advisory Foundation noted at least five arbitrary arrests, three by the military and two by police. NGOs noted the number of arbitrary detentions was likely much higher during the year.	The 2023 report generally discusses illegal detentions and failures by provincial and local authorities to observe protections against arbitrary arrest and detention. The 2024 report provides specific examples of arbitrary arrests by police and military forces during states of emergency, while NGOs stated the actual number of arbitrary detentions was likely much higher.
Arrest Procedures and Treatment of Detainees	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Arrest Procedures and Treatment of Detainees or its contents.
The law required authorities to issue specific written arrest orders prior to detention, and a judge was required to charge a suspect with a specific criminal offense within 24 hours of arrest. NGOs stated judges frequently did not determine a specific criminal offense, particularly for arrests of protesters. Authorities generally observed the time limit for charging a suspect, although in some provinces initial detention was often considerably longer.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Arrest Procedures and Treatment of Detainees or its contents.
Detainees had a constitutional right to an attorney. Those without financial means to pay for an attorney had the right to request a court-appointed attorney from the Public Defender's Office. Although court-appointed defenders were available, the number of cases and limited time to prepare for the defense continued to present a disadvantage to defendants using a public defender during trials.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Arrest Procedures and Treatment of Detainees or its contents.
The law entitled detainees to prompt visits by lawyers and family members, but NGOs continued to report delays depending on the circumstances and the willingness of local courts and prison guards to enforce the law.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Arrest Procedures and Treatment of Detainees or its contents.
Pretrial Detention: Corruption and general judicial inefficiency caused trial delays. The length of pretrial detention did not usually exceed the maximum sentence for the alleged crime. A human rights organization reported the misuse of pretrial detention was common throughout the country and led to overcrowding, violence, and insufficient health services in prisons.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Pretrial Detention.
e. Denial of Fair Public Trial	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Denial of Fair Public Trial.
While the constitution provided for an independent judiciary, corruption impaired the judicial process. Legal experts, bar associations, and NGOs reported on the susceptibility of the judiciary to take bribes for favorable decisions and faster resolution of cases. Violence and outside pressure, especially from criminal groups, further compromised judicial independence and impartiality.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Denial of Fair Public Trial.

Civil society organizations expressed concern regarding judicial independence and pointed to events that, in their judgment, reflected attempts to influence the judiciary or constituted power struggles among judicial officials that compromised the administration of justice. In February, the National Court of Justice appointed Wilman Teran as head of the Judicial Council. Teran then made a series of decisions that civil society groups characterized as “dubious.” At midnight on February 17, the Judicial Council removed all its provincial directors and designated Teran’s alleged close contacts as directors to form a new majority on the council. Civil society groups claimed this new majority approved questionable resolutions to hire, fire, and reassign judges nationwide. For example, on August 19, in a late-night virtual vote, the council, despite not having a majority present, moved to fire one of its members, Judge Walter Macias. President Lasso, Attorney General Diana Salazar, and the entire National Court of Justice called for the resignation of Teran and other council members. On September 14, a Pichincha judge annulled the council’s decision to remove Macias and ordered his immediate reinstatement as a National Court of Justice judge. Once reinstated, on September 28, Macias called to trial two council members for influence peddling. Both members were subsequently removed from the council.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Denial of Fair Public Trial.
Media reported criminal groups killed Guayas Province prosecutor Leonardo Palacios on June 1 in Duran. According to the Attorney General’s Office, Palacios had been investigating a homicide. Separately, on June 1, six armed, hooded individuals threatened to kill Attorney General Salazar through a video sent to her personal cell phone.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Denial of Fair Public Trial.
On July 14, police reported an armed attack on the local offices of the Attorney General’s Office in Santo Domingo. One official was injured in the attack. On July 27, the Attorney General’s Office announced prosecutors and judicial officials in the coastal provinces of Guayas, Manabi, Esmeraldas, Santo Domingo, and Los Rios would telework for security reasons.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Denial of Fair Public Trial.
In March, a judge sentenced three individuals to 34 years in prison as coauthors of the May 2022 murder of prosecutor Luz Marina Delgado and her assistant. As of September, the Attorney General’s Office continued to investigate the August 2022 killings of prosecutor Federico Estrella and judge Nelson Patricio Yáñez.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Denial of Fair Public Trial.
According to the Judiciary Council, there was a $265 million deficit for the administration of justice, including shortfalls in funds necessary to pay salaries of judiciary officials, update infrastructure and technology, and buy office supplies. The council also noted a deficit of 692 judges and 500 prosecutors nationwide, which, according to an NGO, led to high workloads for public servants and delays and potential violations of due process.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Denial of Fair Public Trial.
Trial Procedures	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Trial Procedures.
The law provided for the right to a fair and public trial, and the judiciary generally enforced this right. While defendants had the right to free assistance from an interpreter, some defendants complained the lack of an interpreter at court hearings made preparation of a defense problematic for non-Spanish speakers, and that the quality of interpreters was poor and caused problems when working with public defenders.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Trial Procedures.
Judges reportedly rendered decisions more quickly or more slowly due to media and political pressure or fear in some cases. There were reported delays of up to one year in scheduling some trials. Prisoners reported lengthy delays in setting dates for preliminary hearings after their cases reached a higher court.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Trial Procedures.
Political Prisoners and Detainees	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Political Prisoners and Detainees.

There were no reports of political prisoners or detainees.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Denial of Fair Public Trial.
f. Transnational Repression	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Transnational Repression.
g. Property Seizure and Restitution	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Property Seizure and Restitution.
h. Arbitrary or Unlawful Interference with Privacy, Family, Home, or Correspondence	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Arbitrary or Unlawful Interference with Privacy, Family, Home, or Correspondence.
The law prohibited such actions, and there were no reports the government failed to respect these prohibitions.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Arbitrary or Unlawful Interference with Privacy, Family, Home, or Correspondence.
Section 2. Respect for Civil Liberties	Section 2. Liberty	2024 report has updated section headers.
a. Freedom of Expression, Including for Members of the Press and Other Media	a. Freedom of the Press	2024 report has updated section headers.
The constitution provided for freedom of expression, including for members of the press and other media, but laws restricted this right. Civil society organizations reported criminal groups perpetrated widespread violence and harassment against journalists, causing them to self-censor their reporting.	The constitution provided for freedom of expression, including for members of the press and other media, but laws restricted this right. The law prohibited persons from using “discrediting expressions,” treated as a misdemeanor with a 15- to 30-day detention. The government did not invoke this law to restrict freedom of expression during the year.	The 2023 report emphasizes violence and harassment against journalists by criminal groups that resulted in self-censorship. The 2024 report instead focuses on legal restrictions on freedom of expression, noting the existence of penalties for “discrediting expressions,” while stating the government did not enforce the law during the year.
Freedom of Expression: There were significant restrictions on media freedom. Journalists and NGOs said certain politicians and political parties continued to use the “press as enemy” trope and accuse media of being “corrupt” and “liars.” The media watchdog NGO Fundamedios said the government had not made substantial progress on freedom of expression rights, noting both the lack of progress on investigating and prosecuting high-profile past abuses and continuing abuses.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Freedom of Expression.
Several journalists and news outlets objected to President Lasso’s speech criticizing the press following a government corruption investigation – spurred by investigative reporting – that allegedly connected him to criminal groups. During a February 14 national broadcast, the president referred to journalists as “mercenaries of news entertainment” and “media terrorists,” suggesting the journalists were seeking “likes” [on social media] to “continue collecting their pay.” The law prohibited persons from using “discrediting expressions,” treated as a misdemeanor with a 15- to 30-day detention. There were no reports the government invoked this law to restrict freedom of expression.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Freedom of Expression.
Violence and Harassment: Local government authorities and criminal groups committed acts of violence and harassment against journalists. Fundamedios reported 39 acts of violence or harassment against journalists perpetrated by state actors between January and July. Civil society organizations maintained the state did not adequately investigate or prosecute the crimes and demonstrated little effort to halt the aggressions.	Physical Attacks, Imprisonment, and Pressure: Local government authorities and criminal groups committed acts of violence and harassment against journalists. The Observatory for Rights and Justice of Ecuador reported that journalists claimed they were subject to government surveillance and interception of communications. On January 30, the mayor of Loja criticized journalists, asserting media “exuded verbal violence”; the mayor also characterized journalists as “extortionists.”	The 2023 and 2024 reports document the same issue of violence and harassment against journalists by local authorities and criminal groups, but provide different examples. The 2023 report emphasizes reported acts of violence and lack of state accountability, while the 2024 report highlights allegations of government surveillance, interception of communications, and hostile statements made by public officials against journalists.
Censorship or Content Restrictions for Members of the Press and Other Media, Including Online Media: Fundamedios reported four censorship cases between January and July, three of which were initiated by the state and one by a news outlet. The NGO noted the government did not adequately investigate or prosecute these cases.	Censorship by Governments, Military, Intelligence, or Police Forces, Criminal Groups, or Armed Extremist or Rebel Groups: The media nongovernmental organization (NGO) Fundamedios reported several censorship cases between January and August. The NGO noted the government did not adequately investigate or prosecute these cases.	Both reports document the same content.
According to Fundamedios, the government canceled the bidding process for the allocation of FM radio and broadcast television frequencies, announced in 2020. Civil society organizations had criticized the Agency for the Regulation and Control of Telecommunications-administered bidding process as lacking transparency and allowing two bidders to accumulate a disproportionate number of frequencies.	Some media outlets reported officials removed them from official chat rooms and restricted their access to public information. On June 10, the national television interview program Los Irreverentes was discontinued. The network cited commercial justifications for the discontinuation of the program.	The 2023 and 2024 reports both document concerns regarding restrictions on media independence and access to information, but provide different examples. The 2023 report focuses on the cancellation of the FM radio and television frequency bidding process and concerns regarding transparency, while the 2024 report highlights restrictions on media access to public information and the discontinuation of a national television interview program.

Libel/Slander Laws: Libel and slander were criminal offenses under the law, with penalties of up to three years in prison, plus fines. The law assigned responsibility to media owners as well as journalists, who were held liable for opinion pieces or statements by reporters or others, including readers, using their media platforms. Monitoring organizations reported the national government did not prosecute journalists for libel during the year, but they reported three cases in which politicians initiated legal proceedings against journalists.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Libel/Slander Laws.
Civil society organizations reported a judge sentenced Guayaquil News journalist and director Guillermo Lizarzaburu and businessman Juan Pablo Paz to two years in prison following a complaint filed by former legislator Pablo Muentes. Muentes accused Lizarzaburu and Paz of using anonymous social media accounts to slander Muentes.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Libel/Slander Laws.
El Universo newspaper cartoonist Xavier Bonilla (whose nom de plume was "Bonil") faced a libel suit after he published a cartoon allegedly accusing Alembert Vera, president of the Citizen Participation and Social Control Council and previously a lawyer for former President Rafael Correa, of embezzlement and involvement in organized crime. According to Fundamedios, Vera's father, Gutemberg Vera, filed the libel case against Bonil.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Libel/Slander Laws.
Nongovernmental Impact: Unknown persons not presumed connected with government authorities conducted attacks against journalists during the year. Civil society organizations reported criminal groups perpetrated widespread violence and harassment against journalists. According to Fundamedios, as of July 31, five journalists fled the country following serious death threats from criminal groups. Karol Noroña, a journalist from digital news outlet GK who reported on organized crime and prison violence, fled the country on March 24 after receiving death threats. Journalists and civil society organizations reported journalists covering corruption, prison violence, and violence linked to the drug trade often self-censored their reporting due to fear of reprisals from criminal groups.	Unknown persons not presumed connected with government authorities conducted attacks against journalists during the year. Reporters Without Borders reported the rise of criminal gangs and drug cartel-related violence impacted aggression, threats, attacks, and killings.	The 2023 and 2024 reports both document attacks and threats against journalists by nongovernmental actors and criminal groups. The 2023 report emphasizes journalists fleeing the country and self-censorship due to death threats and violence linked to organized crime, while the 2024 report focuses more broadly on the impact of gang and drug cartel violence on threats, attacks, and killings targeting journalists.
On March 20, television stations and journalists simultaneously received envelopes containing explosive devices. Unknown individuals sent three envelopes to the newsrooms of the television stations Ecuavisa, Teleamazonas, and TC Television, while the other two were sent to radio station EXA FM and journalist Carlos Vera. Most journalists were unharmed except for Ecuavisa journalist Lenin Artieda, who suffered minor injuries when he inserted into his computer a memory stick that contained an explosive device. The Attorney General's Office opened an investigation into the attacks.	Between January and August, Fundamedios registered 22 aggressions perpetrated by alleged criminal and terrorist organizations against media. These aggressions suggested a pattern of intimidation, threats, and direct attacks against journalists and media outlets.	The 2023 and 2024 reports both document attacks and intimidation targeting journalists and media outlets by criminal actors, but provide different examples. The 2023 report focuses on explosive devices sent to television stations and journalists that injured one reporter, while the 2024 report highlights a broader pattern of aggressions, threats, and direct attacks against media outlets documented by Fundamedios.
On April 24, the Attorney General's Office reported that a judge sentenced two individuals each to 34 years and six months in prison for the murder of journalist Gerardo Delgado in August 2022. In February 2022, a Guayas court convicted and sentenced to prison six other individuals for the crime. As of August 25, five of the individuals were appealing the court's decision.	On January 30, members of a criminal gang in Guayaquil attacked the shared facility of the state-owned networks TC Televisión and Gamavisión during a live broadcast. Armed men invaded the studio and beat and then kidnapped several media workers.	The 2023 and 2024 reports both document violence targeting journalists and media organizations, but provide different examples. The 2023 report focuses on prosecutions and sentencing related to the murder of journalist Gerardo Delgado, while the 2024 report highlights a criminal gang attack on the facilities of TC Televisión and Gamavisión during a live broadcast in Guayaquil.
Actions to Expand Freedom of Expression, Including for Members of the Press and Other Media: On August 23, the government issued a decree that defined risk prevention and protection measures for journalists. The decree included new risk prevention measures, such as mapping risks facing journalists, the development of protection protocols, and the creation of support networks. New protection measures included monitoring threats and attacks and security training for journalists.	Efforts to Preserve the Independence of the Media: On March 20, President Noboa signed the Chapultepec and Salta Declarations, committing the government to promote freedom of expression. On August 23, the government issued a decree that defined risk prevention and protection measures for journalists. The decree included new risk prevention measures, such as mapping risks facing journalists, the development of protection protocols, and the creation of support networks. New protection measures included monitoring threats and attacks and security training for journalists.	The 2023 and 2024 reports document similar government efforts to support freedom of expression and protections for journalists. The 2024 report expands on these efforts by noting President Noboa's signing of the Chapultepec and Salta Declarations committing the government to promote freedom of expression.
Internet Freedom	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 removed the section on Internet Freedom

The government did not restrict or disrupt access to the internet or censor online content.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 removed the section on Internet Freedom
A government regulation required that internet service providers comply with all information requests from the superintendent of telecommunications, allowing access to client Internet Protocol addresses and information without a judicial order. The law held media outlets responsible for online comments from readers if the outlet had no established mechanisms for commenters to register their personal data (including national identification number) or no system to delete offensive comments. The law also prohibited media from using information obtained from social media unless they verified the author of the information.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 removed the section on Internet Freedom
As of August 25, the government had not issued regulations for the application of a 2021 law regarding personal data protection and had not appointed a data protection superintendent. Media watchdog groups such as Fundamedios previously had largely praised the law for establishing high standards for data and privacy protection while protecting freedom of expression.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 removed the section on Internet Freedom
b. Freedoms of Peaceful Assembly and Association	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Freedoms of Peaceful Assembly and Association.
The law provided for the freedoms of peaceful assembly and association, and the government generally respected these rights, although authorities declared four states of exception throughout the year due to rising crime and natural disasters. The related executive decrees included restrictions on freedom of assembly, association, and the inviolability of home and correspondence. Three decrees enabled the government to deploy the armed forces to support police operations.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Freedoms of Peaceful Assembly and Association.
Freedom of Peaceful Assembly	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Freedom of Peaceful Assembly.
The law provided for freedom of peaceful assembly, and the government generally respected this right. Public rallies required prior government permits, which authorities usually granted.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Freedom of Peaceful Assembly.
Human rights organization reported that after a Global Marijuana March in Guayaquil on May 5, police officers harassed demonstrators and removed them from the street, citing lack of permits. According to a human rights activist, police officers attempted to confiscate a speaker and other equipment from a demonstrator and assaulted other participants with batons and pepper spray.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Freedom of Peaceful Assembly.
c. Freedom of Religion	d. Violations in Religious Freedom	See the Department of State's annual International Religious Freedom Report at https://www.state.gov/religiousfreedomreport/ .
d. Freedom of Movement and the Right to Leave the Country	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Freedom of Movement and the Right to Leave the Country.
The law provided for freedom of internal movement, foreign travel, emigration, and repatriation, and the government generally respected these rights.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Freedom of Movement and the Right to Leave the Country.
e. Protection of Refugees	c. Protection to Refugees	2024 report has updated section headers.
The government cooperated with the Office of the UN High Commissioner for Refugees and other humanitarian organizations in providing protection and assistance to refugees, returning refugees, or asylum seekers, as well as other persons of concern.	The government cooperated with the Office of the UN High Commissioner for Refugees and other humanitarian organizations in providing protection and assistance to refugees, returning refugees, or asylum seekers, as well as other persons of concern.	Both reports document the same content.
Access to Asylum: The law provided for the granting of asylum or refugee status, and the government had established a system for providing protection to refugees.	Provision of First Asylum: The law provided for the granting of asylum or refugee status, and the government had a system for providing protection to refugees.	Both reports document the same content.

Abuse of Refugees and Asylum Seekers: Migrants and refugees, especially women, children, and lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer, and intersex (LGBTQI+) individuals, sometimes experienced gender-based violence and human trafficking, according to UN agencies and local NGOs. Authorities reported an increase in forced labor, sex trafficking, and the forced recruitment of migrants and refugees into criminal activity, such as drug trafficking and robbery, on the northern and southern borders, particularly by domestic criminal groups and transnational criminal organizations that also operated in Colombia. Forced recruitment increasingly took place in schools and targeted young persons, especially young men and adolescents. Continued migrant and refugee arrivals at irregular crossings, due to visa requirements for Venezuelan nationals; increasing xenophobia; and a lack of local and municipal government coordination or capacity to address the protection of particularly vulnerable groups complicated the government's ability to address and prevent abuses against migrants and refugees. Migrants reported a lack of trust, significant corruption, and xenophobia in public institutions, including within police and the Attorney General's Office, that made it difficult to report abuse, especially gender-based violence and human trafficking.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Abuse of Refugees and Asylum Seekers.
Migrants faced abuses such as overtime work without due pay, especially in the growing digital platform sector. According to a union, 80 percent of digital platform workers were migrants.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Abuse of Refugees and Asylum Seekers.
Freedom of Movement: With the end of the special protocol in August for registering and regularizing unaccompanied minor migrants, they risked being institutionalized.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Freedom of Movement.
Access to Basic Services: The law provided for protection and access to health care, education, and other services to all individuals irrespective of their migration status. Nonetheless, some Venezuelan migrant and refugee children remained out of the school system, according to official government statistics. According to NGOs, barriers to the enrollment and retention of refugee and migrant children in school included a lack of information regarding the right to access to education, hidden costs of schooling such as uniforms, lack of classroom space, and in some instances xenophobic attitudes towards Venezuelans, including discrimination and arbitrary documentation requirements for school enrollment.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Access to Basic Services.
According to UN agencies and NGOs, refugees encountered discrimination in accessing employment and housing. Recognized refugees received national identification cards intended to facilitate access to education, employment, banking, and other public services; however, refugees and migrants reported that at times employers did not recognize government-issued documents that established their right to work, and international organizations reported that registration documents were often not sufficient to access bank accounts in practice. Further, international organizations and NGO partners reported the public health system had "totally collapsed." A strained public health system complicated access to health care for migrants and refugees with serious and chronic illnesses, as well as gender-based violence survivors, LGBTQI+ migrants, and sex workers seeking access to sexual and reproductive health services.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Access to Basic Services.
Durable Solutions: The government accepted refugees for resettlement and offered naturalization to refugees but recognized very small numbers of Venezuelan refugees. Colombian nationals constituted 96 percent of all recognized refugees. Discrimination and limited access to formal employment and housing affected refugees' ability to integrate into the local community.	Resettlement: As part of the regularization initiative, the government sought to achieve better integration of migrants and refugees in their host communities; nevertheless, discrimination as well as limited access to formal employment, education, and housing affected migrants' and refugees' ability to integrate.	The 2023 and 2024 reports document similar challenges regarding the integration of refugees and migrants, including discrimination and limited access to employment and housing. The 2023 report focuses on refugee resettlement and naturalization, particularly for Venezuelan and Colombian refugees, while the 2024 report emphasizes government regularization initiatives intended to improve integration into host communities.

Temporary Protection: Registration for an estimated 350,000 Venezuelans who entered the country irregularly opened on February 16. Previously, in September 2022, the Ministry of Interior opened the registration process to an estimated 120,000 Venezuelan migrants who had entered the country regularly, as well as all unaccompanied minors, regardless of nationality or migration status. Registration for an estimated 90,000 non-Venezuelans who entered the country regularly opened in November 2022. Registration produced a certificate that acted as a temporary residence permit and protected the holder from deportation on migration-related grounds or from incurring migration-related fines while the regularization process was underway. On August 31, registration closed for all groups, after more than 200,000 migrants had completed registration. Through April 2024, registered individuals could request a temporary residency visa from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. As part of the larger regularization initiative, the Ministry of Social and Economic Inclusion implemented a special procedure to register and regularize 776 unaccompanied minors.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 removed the section on Temporary Protection.
Section 3. Freedom to Participate in the Political Process	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the entire Section 3 on Freedom to Participate in the Political Process.
The law provided citizens the ability to choose their government in free and fair periodic elections held by secret ballot and based on universal and equal suffrage.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the entire Section 3 on Freedom to Participate in the Political Process.
Elections and Political Participation	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the entire Section 3 on Freedom to Participate in the Political Process.
Abuses or Irregularities in Recent Elections: National elections were widely reported to be fair and free of abuses and irregularities.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the entire Section 3 on Freedom to Participate in the Political Process.
Participation of Women and Members of Marginalized or Vulnerable Groups: Social media harassment of women politicians and candidates continued. The NGO Participación Ciudadana (Citizen Participation) found 331 derogatory tweets against 38 women in politics and government in a study conducted between January 3 and February 2, which coincided with the official electoral campaign period leading up to the February 5 local and provincial elections. According to the study, derogatory tweets contained discriminatory messaging dealing with the perceived roles of women in society.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the entire Section 3 on Freedom to Participate in the Political Process.
Section 4. Corruption in Government	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	For additional information about corruption in the country, please see the Department of State's Investment Climate Statement for Ecuador and the Department of State's International Narcotics Control Strategy Report, which includes information on financial crimes. The 2024 removed the entire Section 3 on Freedom to Participate in the Political Process.
The law provided criminal penalties for corruption by officials, and the government generally implemented the law effectively. There were numerous reports of government corruption throughout the year.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the entire Section 3 on Freedom to Participate in the Political Process.
Corruption: The government launched or continued multiple investigations, judicial proceedings, and legislative audits of officials accused of corruption related to state contracts and commercial endeavors that reached the highest levels of government. In December 2022, President Lasso inaugurated the country's first specialized court for corruption and organized crime. The court began hearing cases early in the year and won its first convictions in July and August.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the entire Section 3 on Freedom to Participate in the Political Process.

On May 25, judge Banny Molina, who granted a habeas corpus that many considered legally dubious to former Vice President Jorge Glas (convicted on corruption charges in August 2022), was charged with unlawful usurpation of power and sentenced to one year in prison. In November 2022, a judge from Santo Domingo Province approved an early release for time served for Glas. Emerson Curipallo, a judge from Guayas Province, restored Glas's political rights on June 8, despite the law stipulating that Glas's political rights could be restored only upon completion of his prison sentence. The Electoral Dispute Tribunal fined Curipallo $31,500, removed his political rights, and dismissed him from office on August 24 for interfering in the electoral process.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the entire Section 3 on Freedom to Participate in the Political Process.
On February 22, the Attorney General's Office announced it had filed bribery-related charges against former President Lenin Moreno and 37 others related to the construction of the controversial Chinese government-backed Coca Codo Sinclair dam and hydroelectric plant. Investigations began in 2019, after journalists exposed an offshore Panamanian company with links to Moreno and dam builder Sinohydro's Ecuadorian lobbyist. The preliminary hearing took place on March 3, and the Attorney General's Office included three new suspects in the case. The Solicitor General's Office charged 18 of the 37 persons originally accused by the Attorney General's Office in June. The case continued as of November 15.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the entire Section 3 on Freedom to Participate in the Political Process.
Section 5. Governmental Posture Towards International and Nongovernmental Monitoring and Investigation of Alleged Abuses of Human Rights	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the entire Section 3 on Freedom to Participate in the Political Process.
A number of domestic and international human rights groups generally operated without government restriction to monitor or investigate human rights conditions or cases and publish their findings. Government officials were often cooperative and responsive to the views of these groups.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the entire Section 3 on Freedom to Participate in the Political Process.
A human rights organization reported cases in which the government denied or was reluctant to provide updated information to local human rights NGOs who were conducting investigations.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the entire Section 3 on Freedom to Participate in the Political Process.
Retribution Against Human Rights Defenders: A human rights organization reported continuous harassment and threats to community-based human rights defenders and their families. As a result, some human rights activists were forcibly displaced from their communities.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the entire Section 3 on Freedom to Participate in the Political Process.
Government Human Rights Bodies: The Ombudsman's Office was an administratively and financially independent body focused on human rights and subordinate to the Transparency and Social Control branch of government. Some human rights groups viewed the Ombudsman's Office as lacking sufficient initiative and experience to deal effectively with critical human rights cases.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the entire Section 3 on Freedom to Participate in the Political Process.
Section 6. Discrimination and Societal Abuses
Women	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Women.
Rape and Domestic Violence: The law criminalized rape of men and women, including spousal and intimate partner rape and other forms of domestic and sexual violence. Rape was punishable with penalties of up to 22 years in prison. The law did not specify so-called corrective rape of LGBTQI+ individuals. The penalty for rape where death occurred was 22 to 26 years' imprisonment. Domestic violence was punishable with penalties ranging from four days to seven years in prison and a substantial fine for "damages, pain, and suffering," depending on the severity of the crime. The government did not enforce the law effectively.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Rape and Domestic Violence.

According to local experts, reporting rapes and other forms of violence continued to be a traumatic and revictimizing process, particularly for girls. For example, a rape survivor had to file a complaint at the Attorney General's Office and submit to gynecological evaluations (akin to forensic exams designed) administered by medical experts. Many individuals did not report cases of rape and sexual assault due to fear of retribution from the perpetrator and social stigma. Women living in rural areas of the country encountered further difficulties reporting assaults, due to the limited presence of government offices in their towns.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Rape and Domestic Violence.
The law provided for reparations to survivors of gender-based violence. The law defined rape, including spousal rape or incest, forced prostitution, sexual harassment, and other analogous practices, as forms of sexual violence. It also entitled survivors to immediate protective measures designed to prevent or stop additional violence, such as police surveillance, placement in shelters, and assistance programs for the survivor and family. These measures were generally enforced.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Rape and Domestic Violence.
According to human rights organizations, survivors were generally reluctant to press domestic violence charges. Judges lacked specialized training for dealing with gender-based violence, and the court system was insufficiently staffed to deal with the caseload.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Rape and Domestic Violence.
Other Forms of Gender-based Violence or Harassment: The law provided for penalties of one to five years in prison for sexual harassment. The law mandated that judges prohibit contact between the aggressor and the survivor to prevent revictimization and intimidation, and the law was generally enforced. Despite the legal prohibition of sexual harassment and government implementation of the law, women's rights organizations said survivors tended not to report alleged harassment and that harassment remained common in public spaces, including on social media.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Rape and Domestic Violence.
In November 2022, the government elevated the Secretariat of Human Rights to a ministry, renamed the Ministry of Women and Human Rights. Civil society and international organizations reported slow progress in government efforts to prevent femicides and implement the Unified Registry of Violence Against Women, as stipulated by law.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Rape and Domestic Violence.
As of August 23, the Attorney General's Office reported 64 femicides, on track to exceed the 88 total femicides in 2022. The Attorney General's Office also reported the judiciary had sentenced individuals involved in 13 of the 88 femicide cases in 2022.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Rape and Domestic Violence.
Police Lieutenant Colonel German Caceres, sought for allegedly killing his spouse in September 2022, was captured by Colombian police in December 2022. Caceres confessed to the crime of femicide, and on May 25, a judge sentenced him to 34 years and eight months in prison. The judge also ordered Caceres to pay $260,000 in compensation to the victim's family.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Rape and Domestic Violence.
Discrimination: The constitution afforded women the same legal status and rights as men. Nevertheless, discrimination against women was prevalent, particularly with respect to economic opportunities for older women and for those in the lower economic strata. Women continued to face wage disparities compared with men. NGOs said women also faced discrimination in job recruitment, housing access, and some judicial proceedings, namely, in reporting and filing charges in cases of alleged sexual abuse.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Rape and Domestic Violence.

According to union leaders, employers continued to assign women heavier workloads, forcing them to “clean up” workstations afterhours, especially in the agricultural sector. A workers’ association alleged this also occurred in a textile factory where women regularly worked overtime and did not receive minimum wage. Official statistics showed that in July, the average monthly income for an employed man was 22 percent higher than for an employed woman.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Rape and Domestic Violence.
On January 10, the National Assembly approved a “violet economy law” to promote gender equality in the labor market. The law mandated that men and women in the public and private sectors receive equal pay; that companies with three or more members on their boards of directors ensure that at least one of them be a woman; that protocols exist to prevent sexual harassment and deal promptly and fairly with complaints; and that companies refrain from asking discriminatory questions during selection processes or request different or additional documents to verify women’s competencies. The law also strengthened the labor inspection system to adequately address gender issues. Private companies were to receive tax incentives when creating jobs for women.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Rape and Domestic Violence.
On May 12, the legislature passed the “human care law,” which created and extended workers’ paid and unpaid leave for the birth of a child. The law extended nursing leave by three months, added five days of paternal leave after the baby was born, and granted paid leave to attend medical checkups for both parents during pregnancy, labor, and birth. The law provided for permanent lactation rooms in offices with 50 or more women of childbearing age and 20-minute breaks every two hours to use the rooms. At the worker’s request, employers were required to provide child care onsite or pay for offsite child care for children under five years of age.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Rape and Domestic Violence.
Reproductive Rights: There were no reports of coerced abortion or involuntary sterilization on the part of government authorities.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Reproductive Rights or any of its content.
Some women’s rights activists complained that a lack of comprehensive sex education limited individuals’ ability to manage their reproductive health and that ineffective distribution of birth control reduced access to contraception. Emergency contraception was available as part of methods for family planning; however, conservative groups’ stance against contraceptive use and social stigma, including potential social ostracization, discouraged women from seeking family planning services.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Reproductive Rights or any of its content.
The government provided access to sexual and reproductive health services for survivors of sexual violence. Emergency contraception and postexposure prophylaxis was available as part of clinical management of rape.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Reproductive Rights or any of its content.
A 2019 study found income status affected equity in sexual and reproductive health access and outcomes, with low income and rural individuals having significantly less access. UN agencies reported that vulnerable populations, including Afro-Ecuadorians, Indigenous groups, rural inhabitants, LGBTQI+ individuals, persons with disabilities, HIV-positive persons, and migrants, faced limited access and discrimination regarding the provision of reproductive health services. Adolescents also encountered barriers to access reproductive health services.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Reproductive Rights or any of its content.
International organizations said public hospitals continued to face problems when stocking and restocking emergency contraception materials nationwide. Organizations reported that despite government efforts to make contraception materials available, the lack of supply and demand studies to accurately calculate quantities, delays in delivering material from central warehouses to local hospitals, the lack of updated population statistics, and unpredictable migration flows complicated these efforts.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Reproductive Rights or any of its content.

While the law prohibited discrimination against girls who become mothers, NGOs reported some faced discrimination and subsequently left school. A lack of resources also resulted in young mothers discontinuing their education to pursue work.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Reproductive Rights or any of its content.
Following a 2020 Inter-American Court of Human Rights ruling that held the state accountable for failing to protect the rights of a girl who was harassed and sexually abused by her school's vice rector, which led to her suicide, the Ministry of Education launched the National Strategy for Comprehensive Sex Education on August 14. Although several international and civil society organizations applauded the initiative, they reported that implementation remained the initiative's biggest problem.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Reproductive Rights or any of its content.
Systemic Racial or Ethnic Violence and Discrimination	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Systemic Racial or Ethnic Violence and Discrimination or any of its content.
The constitution declared the state to be plurinational and affirmed the principle of nonviolence and nondiscrimination by recognizing the rights of Indigenous, Afro-Ecuadorian, and Montubio (an independent ethnic group of persons with a mixture of Afro-Ecuadorian, Indigenous, and Spanish ancestry) communities. It also mandated affirmative action policies to provide for the representation of minorities. NGOs and civil society representatives said those provisions were not effectively enforced.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Systemic Racial or Ethnic Violence and Discrimination or any of its content.
Citing 2021 official data, media reported Indigenous, Afro-Ecuadorian, and Montubio populations experienced the highest poverty rates in the country. Among those populations, the most affected were Indigenous children, followed by Montubio girls.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Systemic Racial or Ethnic Violence and Discrimination or any of its content.
Afro-Ecuadorians, who accounted for approximately 4.8 percent of the population according to the most recent census (2022), suffered pervasive discrimination, particularly regarding educational and economic opportunity. Afro-Ecuadorian organizations noted that despite the absence of official discrimination, societal discrimination and stereotyping in media continued to result in barriers to employment, education, and housing. A national gender survey published in 2019 found Afro-Ecuadorian women were particularly vulnerable to gender-based violence and harassment based on racial, gender, and sexual stereotypes.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Systemic Racial or Ethnic Violence and Discrimination or any of its content.
An Afro-Ecuadorian rights NGO reported media discriminated against Afro-Ecuadorians. Local human rights NGO Regional Human Rights Advisory Foundation reported that while conducting an operation, military personnel approached a young Afro-Ecuadorian on May 29 in Quito when he was walking home after school. A news outlet was broadcasting the operation live, and journalists misconstrued the boy's presence and described him as an alleged criminal. A local human rights group provided legal assistance to the family and filed an injunction on June 12, arguing the journalists had violated his right to equality, nondiscrimination, identity, and good name, and demanding the journalists clear his name. On July 7, a judge rejected the injunction.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Systemic Racial or Ethnic Violence and Discrimination or any of its content.
Afro-Ecuadorians reported employers often profiled them based on their job application photographs and racial stereotypes.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Systemic Racial or Ethnic Violence and Discrimination or any of its content.
Indigenous and LGBTQI+ individuals as well as persons with disabilities also experienced employment discrimination.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Systemic Racial or Ethnic Violence and Discrimination or any of its content.
Indigenous Peoples	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Indigenous Peoples or any of its content.
There were isolated reports of restrictions on Indigenous persons and their institutions in decisions affecting their property or traditional ways of life.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Indigenous Peoples or any of its content.

The law provided Indigenous persons the same civil and political rights as other citizens. The constitution recognized Kichwa and Shuar as “official languages of intercultural relations.” The constitution obligated the state to consult local communities and Indigenous persons prior to initiation of projects on their lands through a process that was free, informed, and culturally appropriate (FPIC), although Indigenous peoples’ organizations noted public- and private-sector actors often ignored this process. In 2008, Indigenous leaders began pressing the government to formally consult its communities affected by extractive activities, but the government had yet to pass a national-level community consultation law.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Indigenous Peoples or any of its content.
The constitution allowed Indigenous persons to participate in the economic benefits that natural resource extraction projects brought and to receive compensation for any damages that resulted. In the case of environmental damage, the law mandated immediate corrective government action and full restitution from the responsible company, although some Indigenous organizations asserted a lack of consultation and remedial action. The law recognized the rights of Indigenous communities to hold property communally, although the titling process remained incomplete in parts of the country.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Indigenous Peoples or any of its content.
On May 31, the government reformed the law that regulated the environmental consultation process (different from FPIC) required prior to granting environmental licenses for projects that impacted the environment within a community. The process consisted of informing involved communities regarding the details of extraction projects that would impact the environment (but not necessarily obtaining consent from those communities).	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Indigenous Peoples or any of its content.
Human rights organizations reported violent confrontations on July 14 between antimining activists and police in Las Naves, Bolivar Province, during an information session for a mining project. The clashes resulted in two arrests and 10 individuals injured. Antimining activists alleged the government deployed a disproportionate police and military force to the area to safeguard the process and repress protesters. The Confederation of Indigenous Nationalities of Ecuador filed a lawsuit questioning the reform’s constitutionality. The Constitutional Court accepted the case on August 1, which suspended the application of the new regulation, halting 178 key infrastructure, mining, renewable, and oil and gas projects for an unspecified amount of time.	No similar language in this report.	The 2024 report does not mention Indigenous Peoples or any of its content.
Children	b. Protection of Children	2024 report has updated section headers.
Birth Registration: According to UNICEF, registration of children with teenage mothers and fathers continued to pose a problem for the government, since the law required underage parents be accompanied by an adult to register their children. While the law prohibited schools from requesting civil registration documents for enrollment, some (mostly public) schools continued to require them. Other government services, including welfare payments and free primary health care, required some form of identification. Migrant children were particularly affected by this requirement, which prevented adequate access to these services.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Child Birth Registration.
Child Abuse: The law criminalized child abuse and provided penalties of 30 days to 26 years in prison, depending on the severity of the abuse. The government enforced the law effectively.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Child Abuse.
Child, Early, and Forced Marriage: The legal marriage age was 18. There were reports of early and forced marriage in rural and poor areas. The government did not enforce the law effectively.	Child Marriage: The legal marriage age was 18. There were reports of early and forced marriage in rural and poor areas.	Both reports document the same content. The 2024 report removes “The government did not enforce the law effectively”.

According to a study by the Planning and Social Studies Center, Plan International, the UN Population Fund, and UNICEF, 27 percent of women ages 18-49 married or entered a domestic partnership before they turned 18. The study showed girls belonging to the poorest quintile were four times more likely to marry by age 18 compared with girls in the richest quintile.	According to a 2023 study by the Gender Roundtable of International Cooperation, Plan International, UN Population Fund, and UNICEF, an estimated 30,000 girls and adolescents were in early unions in the country.	The 2023 and 2024 reports both document child and early unions involving girls and adolescents, but provide different statistics and framing. The 2023 report emphasizes the percentage of women who married or entered domestic partnerships before age 18 and the disproportionate impact on girls in the poorest quintile, while the 2024 report highlights estimates of approximately 30,000 girls and adolescents in early unions nationwide.
Sexual Exploitation of Children: The law prohibited the sale, grooming, or use of children for commercial sexual exploitation, including sex trafficking, sexual exploitation of children, and child pornography, with penalties of 22 to 26 years' imprisonment. The government enforced the law effectively. The penalty for human trafficking, including child sex trafficking, was 13 to 16 years in prison. Authorities did not criminalize all forms of child sex trafficking. The criminal code required proof of force, fraud, or coercion as essential elements of a trafficking crime, neglecting to recognize that anyone younger than age 18 was unable to provide informed consent. The age of consent was 14.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Sexual Exploitation of Children.
Antisemitism	d. Acts of Antisemitism and Antisemitic Incitement	2024 report has updated section headers.
There was a small Jewish community, including an estimated 500 individuals in Quito, 50 individuals in Guayaquil, and an unspecified number of individuals elsewhere in the country. The Jewish community reported the vandalization of an external wall of the Jewish cemetery in Quito with Nazi symbols on January 27. The community painted over the wall and decided not to take legal action against the aggressors.	There was a small Jewish community, including an estimated 450 individuals in Quito, 50 individuals in Guayaquil, and an unspecified number of individuals elsewhere in the country. There were no reports of antisemitic incidents.	The 2023 report mentions reports of antisemitic incidents while the 2024 report documented none.
Trafficking in Persons	e. Trafficking in Persons	See the Department of State's annual Trafficking in Persons Report at https://www.state.gov/trafficking-in-persons-report/ .
Acts of Violence, Criminalization, and Other Abuses Based on Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity or Expression, or Sex Characteristics	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Acts of Violence, Criminalization, and Other Abuses Based on Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity or Expression, or Sex Characteristics and its contents.
Criminalization: No laws criminalized same-sex conduct or gender identity or expression.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Acts of Violence, Criminalization, and Other Abuses Based on Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity or Expression, or Sex Characteristics and its contents.
Violence and Harassment: The NGO Silueta X reported 25 killings of LGBTQI+ individuals as of November 20. The killings were allegedly perpetrated by nonstate actors. LGBTQI+ organizations claimed government institutions in general failed to properly register and categorize violent acts against the LGBTQI+ community, leading to underreporting. LGBTQI+ groups claimed police and prosecutors did not thoroughly investigate deaths of LGBTQI+ individuals, including when there was suspicion that the killing was motivated by anti-LGBTQI+ bias. The NGO Fundación Ecuatoriana Equidad (Ecuadorian Equality Foundation), a sexual health and LGBTQI+ advocacy group, cited police and prosecutors' lax attitude and the lack of technical capacity and knowledge regarding LGBTQI+ individuals to explain insufficient investigations into crimes committed against LGBTQI+ persons.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Acts of Violence, Criminalization, and Other Abuses Based on Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity or Expression, or Sex Characteristics and its contents.
The law also prohibited hate crimes, but LGBTQI+ activists asserted that since the legal codification of hate crimes in 2008, there had been no hate crime convictions for crimes against LGBTQI+ persons.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Acts of Violence, Criminalization, and Other Abuses Based on Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity or Expression, or Sex Characteristics and its contents.

Discrimination: The constitution included the principle of nondiscrimination with respect to gender identity or sexual orientation. The law prohibited discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity. LGBTQI+ persons continued to suffer discrimination from both public and private entities, particularly in education, employment, and access to health care. LGBTQI+ organizations reported transgender persons suffered more discrimination because they were more visible. The law recognized LGBTQI+ couples but did not allow same-sex adoption. For this reason, the law did not grant LGBTQI+ couples rights equal to rights of other persons.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Acts of Violence, Criminalization, and Other Abuses Based on Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity or Expression, or Sex Characteristics and its contents.
LGBTQI+ persons continued to report the government sometimes denied them equal access to formal education. Fundación Ecuatoriana Equidad indicated the government did not comprehensively apply policy provisions to prevent and combat discrimination. LGBTQI+ students, particularly transgender students, sometimes were discouraged from attending classes and were more susceptible to bullying in schools. Human rights activists argued the Ministry of Education and school administrators were slow to respond to complaints regarding harassment, discrimination, or abuse against LGBTQI+ persons.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Acts of Violence, Criminalization, and Other Abuses Based on Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity or Expression, or Sex Characteristics and its contents.
LGBTQI+ persons involved in the commercial sex trade reported abusive situations, extortion, and mistreatment by security forces. In March, sex workers in Quito filed an unprecedented injunction against Quito's then Mayor Santiago Guarderas, who proposed to relocate them outside the city's historic center to remote locations, which they perceived would have been detrimental for their work. Local judges initially ruled in their favor, and as of August 3, the plaintiffs were awaiting the municipality's decision whether to appeal the ruling. According to a spokesperson for the plaintiffs, transgender sex workers would be among those most affected by a possible relocation.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Acts of Violence, Criminalization, and Other Abuses Based on Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity or Expression, or Sex Characteristics and its contents.
Availability of Legal Gender Recognition: The law prohibited changing gender on identity documents for LGBTQI+ persons younger than 18, even with parental consent. As of August 2, a decision remained pending in a case before the Constitutional Court to determine the age at which transgender underage individuals could change their identity information.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Acts of Violence, Criminalization, and Other Abuses Based on Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity or Expression, or Sex Characteristics and its contents.
In May 2022, the Constitutional Court ruled the Office of the Civil Registry could change an individual's sex on record at the person's request without requesting any additional documents. An LGBTQI+ organization reported that despite the ruling, there were cases in which the Office of the Civil Registry denied individuals their right to change their sex on record. The same organization also noted migrants were more vulnerable to the denial of this right. The court also ordered the National Assembly to "discuss and approve a bill to regulate the procedure for changing the sex of transgender persons." As of October, no bill had been approved.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Acts of Violence, Criminalization, and Other Abuses Based on Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity or Expression, or Sex Characteristics and its contents.
Involuntary or Coercive Medical or Psychological Practices: An LGBTQI+ organization reported the existence of clandestine private treatment centers confining LGBTQI+ persons against their will to "cure" or "dehomosexualize" them despite the illegality of such treatment. LGBTQI+ organizations reported the practice persisted under the guise of religious or "wellness" retreats or drug addiction treatment centers. According to one LGBTQI+ organization, the government, with support from civil society organizations, had some success in identifying and closing such institutions. Another LGBTQI+ organization claimed the Attorney General's Office had not taken any action against the individuals who ran these establishments. There were no reports medically unnecessary and irreversible "normalization" surgeries were performed on children or on nonconsenting adult intersex persons.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Acts of Violence, Criminalization, and Other Abuses Based on Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity or Expression, or Sex Characteristics and its contents.

According to human rights NGO Diálogo Diverso (Diverse Dialogue), many individuals confined to the “clinics” were afraid to report involuntary or coercive practices because in most cases their family members forced them into the “treatments.” The NGO reported that in 2022, 19 percent of young LGBTQI+ individuals reported being forced to receive “treatment” to change their gender identity or sexual orientation. LGBTQI+ organizations also reported relatives took LGBTQI+ persons to neighboring countries, where clinics reportedly used violent treatments, including rape, to attempt to change LGBTQI+ persons’ sexual orientation. With support from civil society groups, the government established an interagency roundtable on May 10 to provide effective and coordinated responses to the dangers posed by these so-called clinics.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Acts of Violence, Criminalization, and Other Abuses Based on Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity or Expression, or Sex Characteristics and its contents.
Restrictions of Freedom of Expression, Association, or Peaceful Assembly: In June, Guayaquil mayor Aquiles Álvarez did not approve a permit to allow the annual pride parade to pass through one of the city’s main avenues as it had since 2000, claiming it would cause “great impact to traffic.” Instead, the municipality offered secondary roads for the parade, which civil society organizations interpreted as a way of “hiding” LGBTQI+ individuals. Several LGBTQI+ organizations filed an injunction that led to a judge reversing the mayor’s decision. Álvarez allowed the parade to take place as long as there was not any “disorderly conduct, no nudity, and no mockery.”	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Acts of Violence, Criminalization, and Other Abuses Based on Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity or Expression, or Sex Characteristics and its contents.
Persons with Disabilities	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Persons with Disabilities.
The law prohibited discrimination against persons with physical, sensory, intellectual, and mental disabilities. The law stipulated persons with disabilities had the right to health care and health insurance; to employment and job security; to education, including programs for scholarships and student loans; and to access buildings, transport, and communications. The government did not fully enforce the law.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Persons with Disabilities.
By law, children with disabilities could attend specialized schools, but all educational establishments were required to accommodate students with disabilities. An advocacy NGO for persons with disabilities said nonspecialized institutions lacked the capacity and staff to accommodate the range of disabilities. The NGO said children with disabilities attended primary and secondary education at similar rates to other children, but they attended higher education at lower rates due to a lack of access to quality support and accessible infrastructure. According to the NGO, the lack of interagency coordination especially in the public sector hampered the possibility for persons with disabilities to transit smoothly from high school to universities or technical institutions and then to an independent life.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Persons with Disabilities.
The law required that 4 percent of employees in all public and private enterprises with more than 25 employees be persons with disabilities, and it gave the Ombudsman’s Office responsibility for following up on alleged violations of the rights of persons with disabilities, stipulating fines and punishments for lack of compliance. As of 2021, approximately one-half of enterprises complied with the law.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Persons with Disabilities.
Other Societal Violence or Discrimination	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Other Societal Violence or Discrimination.
Fundación Ecuatoriana Equidad said that although HIV-positive individuals were registered with the social security system, diagnosis, follow-up testing, and treatment continued to be inadequate due to mistreatment toward patients. The NGO said most HIV-positive individuals abandoned treatment due to discrimination from health-care providers.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Other Societal Violence or Discrimination.

Although Ministry of Labor regulations prohibited discrimination against hiring HIV-positive individuals and banned HIV tests as entry requirements for a job, LGBTQI+ organizations argued many employers continued requiring tests.	Section eliminated in 2024 report.	The 2024 removed the section on Other Societal Violence or Discrimination.
Section 7. Worker Rights	b. Worker Rights	The 2024 report has 6 out of the 15 pages dedicated to Worker Rights.
a. Freedom of Association and the Right to Collective Bargaining	Freedom of Association and Collective Bargaining	The 2024 report has 6 out of the 15 pages dedicated to Worker Rights.
The law, with exceptions, provided certain workers the right to form and join trade unions of their choice, to bargain collectively, and to strike. The law required a minimum of 30 workers for the creation of an association, work committee, or labor union, regardless of the total number of employees in the workplace. The law did not allow foreign citizens to serve as trade union officers.	The law, with exceptions, provided certain workers the right to form and join trade unions of their choice, to bargain collectively, and to strike. The law required a minimum of 30 workers for the creation of an association or labor union, regardless of the total number of employees in the workplace. To form a work committee, the law required the participation of 50 percent of a company's employees. Only labor unions that represented 50 percent of a company's employees could sign a collective bargaining agreement.	The 2024 report has 6 out of the 15 pages dedicated to Worker Rights.
The law prohibited the dismissal of union members from the moment a union notified the labor inspector of its general assembly. Employers were not required to reinstate workers fired for union activity but were required to pay such workers compensation and a fine of one year's annual salary for everyone wrongfully dismissed. Individual workers still employed could take complaints against employers to the Labor Inspection Office. Individuals no longer employed could take their complaints to courts charged with protecting labor rights. While courts upheld the right for sectoral unions to negotiate, the government failed to issue implementing regulations, thus preventing negotiations.	The law prohibited the dismissal of union members from the moment a union notified the labor inspector of its definitive board members. Employers were not required to reinstate workers fired for union activity but were required to pay such workers compensation and a fine of one year's annual salary for everyone wrongfully dismissed. Individual workers still employed could take complaints against employers to the Labor Inspection Office. Individuals no longer employed could take their complaints to courts charged with protecting labor rights. Unions with at least 50 percent of a company's total workers could take labor complaints to a tripartite arbitration board established to hear their complaints. The law obligated that mediation begin within 48 hours of issuing a complaint. All private employers with unionized employees were legally required to negotiate collectively when the union so requested.	The 2024 report has 6 out of the 15 pages dedicated to Worker Rights.